...Foreword...

"Whoever thinks a faultless annual to see Thinks what ne'er was, nor is, nor 'er shall be"

IN THE publication of this, our 1918 issue, we present with mingled uneasiness and pleasure the 17th edition of our College Annual. It is hardly possible that the casual reader will understand the vastness of the undertaking which it has been our delectation and duty to perform, over our work we have spent many long but interesting hours and we therefore present without apology the results of our labors, conforting ourselves with the thought that, "He who does his best, does well." We hope that THE 1918 MIRROR will fulfill the traditional aim and that it may be enjoyed by all those who are interested in the "Old College." Our endeavor has been to present to you in this volume every phase of our college life.

When we grow old and time hangs heavy, we may perchance take this volume from its dusty hiding place and in scanning its pages, find consolation and enjoyment. May it then, in truth be a mirror reflecting experiences of some of the happiest days of our lives.

To those students and friends who have rendered us valuable assistance and without whose aid THE MIRROR could not have been even what it is, we proffer our success and hearty thanks.

And now, "with charity to all and malice toward none," we submit this volume to the tender mercy of our readers.

The Editors.

W. G. Foster, D.D.S.

DR. W. G. FOSTER was born in Phillipsburg, New Jersey, on the twenty-third of September, 1860.

Some years later his father and mother took up their residence in Baltimore, where he was educated in private schools until he was fourteen, when he attended the West Nottingham Academy in Cecil County, Maryland, for two years.

After which he entered the Maryland Agricultural College and while there was made Senior Captain of Cadets, holding this position until he left the college.

It may be here mentioned that he was for a number of years Captain of Company K, Fifth Maryland Regiment, and later as Captain on the staff of same regiment as Inspector of rifle practice.

Dr. Foster was graduated from the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery with the Class of 1881, and the following year was appointed as assistant demonstrator in the Prosthetic laboratory.

Five years later he was appointed senior demonstrator of that department.

In 1905 he was appointed senior demonstrator of operative dentistry which position he held until June the eighth, 1914, when he was appointed professor of pathology and thereapeutics and elected dean of the faculty.

Dr. Foster has occupied the position of president of the Maryland State Dental Association, and is now a member of the Board of Governors.

He is a member of the National Dental Association and the National Association of Dental Faculties.

Dr. Foster is the director for Maryland of the Preparedness League of American Dentists.

Seniorism

POSSIBLY the idea has never occurred to some that being a Senior is an honor. It is an honor, for the fact that it represents the best efforts of a man who has been ambitious to such a degree that hard work and self-denial could not be considered as such, during the long, hard years spent in study to enable himself to attain this acme of perfection.

Now that the goal of his ambition has been attained, he is still just in the position where he was during his Freshman year, that of indecision as to whether he is possessed of sufficient nerve and gray matter to conquer the numerous difficulties and disappointments that are ahead of him. Thus it can be readily seen that the ups and downs of a dental education are numerous and the fact that they are numerous causes a Senior to look back and wonder how he ever had the good fortune to accomplish what he has.

In view of the fact that there is a serious side of college life, there is also a humorous side as well. Going into the Senior laboratory any day one will find it a busy scene of industry. Now and then the atmosphere will become blue, as some poor chap has the misfortune to burn his fingers or the solder fails to run in the proper place. One of the Seniors' favorite pastimes is to drop a facing or crown on the floor and after a futile search intermingled with imprintable language, Mr. Senior slowly and sadly comes to the realization that his hard work and facing are memories of the past and he feels so discouraged that he begins to rue the day that he decided to study dentistry. Then again, if the Senior wants exercise he takes a tramp through the slush and mud up to the Dental Depot to obtain teeth for a plate. After having the fun of picking them out, he hoofs it back to the dear old laboratory. Ah, everything is bright and rosy now. He's going to make a plate perhaps. The Jinx thinks otherwise to such an extent that he gets the Senior's "goat." A tooth is ground too much, then he loses a tooth on the floor and finally he winds up by breaking the model. After a masterful outburst of profanity the noble Senior grabs his instruments, slams them in the drawer and says "To H—— with the plate, let the patient wait." And the patient usually does. Such is life. Shoot a quarter. Come seven, come 'leven.

Isn't it remarkable how dignified and professional looking a man feels when he is wearing a white coat? Many people after taking a course of treatment from some of us still maintain a decided belief in the old axioms, "Variety is the spice of life," and "appearances are deceitful." Nevertheless we do love to sport our new white coats, put on a dignified air, look wise and lead the poor suffering human being to the chair of torture. Still, at times we get a "lemon" in the shape of some big female who is continually talking, bossing, fixing her hair, moving around, wiping her nose, gasping and many other petty annoyances, characteristic of some women. With upturned nose and a strong countenance, the brave Senior nobly bears the smell of powder and the glittering fire from the steely eyes of the Amazon, who has lost her nerve; then the touch of a delicate brooch, manipulated by a brute of a man.

Some men are born lazy. Others are not. Nevertheless many of us do love to sleep in the morning. If some of us were to start a diary, probably it would read something like the immortal diary of Mark Twain: "Got up and washed and went to bed." This is not the age of the dawdler and dreamer. Many of us, however, are afflicted with the sleep bug disease to such an extent that our system is poisoned by its effects, thus interfering with our College duties. Many will continue to dream and awake too late to grasp what they so much desire: a chance to live by means of an honorable profession.

We, the men of the Senior Class, who are about to graduate and begin upon our life's work, are fully aware of the fact that we have missed many golden opportunities to better our mental and physical equipment while here at B. C. D. S. Aside from this fact, we have the feeling, to a certain extent, that some, if not all, of our time has been spent wisely, which has given us numerous ideas which cannot but help of being much value to us as professional men. Not only have our efforts played an important part in gaining these ideas, but it has also been through the untiring and persistent efforts of our beloved Faculty. In after years, when we look back upon our College life, there will come the thought that we owe to the Faculty of our Alma Mater a debt of gratitude that can never be fully paid.

A SENIOR'S DREAM

Where do we go from here, Boys?

1.

In Baltimore there is a college—the B. C. D. S,
Claimed to be the oldest college, in the east or west.
North Howard street—eight fifty-one—that marks the site today.
It was three, but now it is four years that you must stay.

CHORUS:

What do you come for here, boys, what do you come for here?
To learn the best of dentistry, that's why that you come here.
When we begin to part for home, you will be heard to say,
Oh joy, oh boy, why don't they let us stay.

One fine day on October first, I believe the date,
Students came rushing back, so they would not be late;
For it was the seventy-eighth annual it had begun.
Old classmates came flocking back from almost every land.

CHORUS:

Where do you come from here, boys, where do you come from here?
We all have our handshakes and we greet each other with cheer.
Then we all settle down to do the best we can this year,
Oh joy, oh boy, where do you come from here?

3.

First at all, at the call when the war began,
We enlisted in the service as a dental man.
We worked so hard to get our card, then the exams. were near,
Next a bright, new sheepskin to fill our hearts with cheer.

CHORUS:

Where do we go from here, boys, where do we go from here?
We'll pull the teeth of Kaiser Bill and then cut off his ear;
Then we'll tack them on a pole, and carry home the prize,
Oh joy, oh boy, our delight beneath the skies.

But let us not forget, we have teeth to fill;
We must do the best of work and with the best of skill.
We must then make up our mind to settle down some place,
And do the best that we know how to help our human race.

CHORUS:

Where do we go from here, boys, where will that place be?
Then I'm sure that we had better just look around and see.
Let me suggest what I think best—it's the land of the broad and free.
Oh joy, oh boy, this is the place for me.

Last of all, after the fall, at the close of war,
We will hang out our shingle and tack above our door
The Stars and Stripes with our delight, and may she ever be,
High above all others and especially Germany.

CHORUS:

Where do we go from here, boys, where do we go from here?
Anywhere we wish to go, for we will have no fear;
Across to France and England, too, the seas will be clear.
Oh joy, oh boy, where do we go from here?

To the Class of 1918

A happy lifetime! so we lightly cry.
To parting friends in eager, thoughtless phrase.
But no man's life is happy 'neath the sky,
No ways are altogether pleasant ways.

We know the year that brings the summer's prim
Brings too the winter's storms and snows and frost.
That manhood's tasks come after youth's playtime,
And man must labor or in sloth be lost.

Now, shall I, who'd like to call upon your way
Life's choicest blessings, ask for you each one,
A primrose path o'er flowery meadows? Nay.
God blesses those, He makes his own.

Men reared in glowing sunshine, seldom rise
To face unbleached the driving storm and rain.
And hearts most truly and most nobly rise
Have learned their wisdom in the school of pain.

Therefore, oh! parting friend, I pray for you.
Courage and strength to meet the fiercest blast,
And God's own sunshine, faithful hearts and true,
To gild your pathway when the storm is past.

Senior Class History

BACK in the good old days of the second decade of the nineteenth century two eminent scientists, Harris and Hayden, realizing that the opportune moment had arrived, opened to the world the first Dental College, the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, and thereby inscribed their names on the roll of honor, which will live until time immemorial.

Each recurring autumn season since that period some few American youths, along with a goodly number from foreign lands, have harkened unto the call to do nobler deeds than the inevitable fall dressing of the soil, so on October 1st, 1915, nearly four-score years later, a rugged collection of verdant and horny-handed sons of toil made pilgrimage to this fount of knowledge, and after making due application for admittance were accepted as a nuclei to be nurtured and developed under this honored institution.

In accordance with a time-honored custom, we were first presented with a set of "Long Bones," and after delving for a few weeks into the anatomical relationship of the various organs of the body one to another, we were given our mid-year examinations, the outcome of which proved highly successful to all.

After spending an enjoyable Christmas vacation, once more we were again at work. It was not long before we were in the throes of our final examinations. From here it was only a matter of time until we had finished most of us successfully, the first year of our professional career.

Summer over, and once more we were welcoming old faces and becoming acquainted with the class which follows us. Our joy upon being grouped together was dimmed by the news that our beloved Professor, Dr. Simon, had passed to his eternal reward. He was a most eminent scientist and a true gentleman. To know him has been one of the most pleasant joys we have ever experience. The memory of him brings back to us the work of some poet or other:

"No one knew him but to love him,
No one named him but to praise."

Most of our hours during the first semester were passed at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, taking our first lessons in Surgery, and you may rest assured we were filled with sorrow when we were notified that we had fulfilled the requirements in this particular branch.

The second semester was spent mainly in the Chemical laboratory, where we learned to our great advantage the difference between atoms and molecules, incidentally the odor of N_2O and H_2S. The remainder of the semester was passed in getting ready for the finals, and when April came we were allowed to don our white coats and enter the Infirmary. How proud we were! At last the height of our long-nurtured ambitions had been reached,—all things come to him who waits—at last we were grave and reverend Seniors.

When the first roll was called we found that our ranks had been greatly depleted. This filled us with a feeling of sorrow akin to pride—sorrow in their absence, pride in the knowledge that they had volunteered to take arms in defense of Liberty (True Liberty), the ultimate democratization of the peoples of the world.

There but remains for us the delightful duty of formally receiving that mark of merit to be bestowed upon us, at once the reward and the honor awarded by our Alma Mater, as evidence of the firm belief that such will rebound with equally as much glory to the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery as pleasure and profit to ourselves.

With this the Class of 1918 becomes only a memory of student days, and may we so live that the life history of each will be such that the briefest truthful thought must be "He lived to bless mankind."

Senior Class Prophecy

THE three years have come and gone and at last we see the day which we have all so often wished we could hasten. As we look back our views differ, some say; how short the time seems since we entered the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery as unsuspecting Freshmen; others think of the long, weary months of college work and remark suggestively, "If we had only known before we started."

Now with the superabundant knowledge acquired in this world-wide famed Institution, the Class of 1918 is assuredly fit, both theoretically and practically, to go out and fight this great world, every one individually, with the high spirit of ambition, aiming at the goal of success.

But it is not the retrospective view with which we are concerned. A glance into the future is the picture which I am to paint; and first let me say to my worst enemy, if I have any enemies in the class, that I wish the honor of writing the Class Prophecy had fallen upon him. The task to me has presented many difficulties, and the outlook for the Class would be infinitely better if some other man had been elected Class Prophet, as my friends have displayed great lack of judgment in selecting me.

Let us hope that they will be more discreet in choosing remedies for their patients, in the treatment of Root Canals, etc., than they have been in selecting their Class Prophet.

Many methods were tried to produce a Class Prophecy. My first idea was to learn the plans and aspirations of the boys by guarded questioning, but this procedure was almost altogether unproductive of results.

In most instances the only ambition anyone would admit was to get a diploma, and I must confess that I would have been glad to have been able to forecast the result on that point in regard to myself.

Most of my plans proved almost a failure in every instance, but on a certain morning B. F. O'Toole conveyed the information to me that he was very much depressed by the fact that in all recent advances of the dental profession there had been no remedy introduced for the "Regeneration of Enamel and Dentin" after the removal of debris from the cavity, and that he proposed to devote his energies after graduation to the preparation of such remedy (opposed to Dr. Grieves), he did not believe that enamel was a dead tissue. Stinson said that he intended to devote his surplus energy to introduce some kind of remedy for the relief of "morning thirst and headache." He thinks it would be of great benefit to humanity if some kind of preparation could be found to combat this awful affliction. McClure thought that he had made the greatest mistake of his life when he undertook the task of studying Dentistry. Now he has decided to take a correspondence course in the "Veterinary Line." Better money on horses and "Tips" on the side. "Can't lose." Crawford took an hour of my valuable time one morning after a lecture on Anatomy. He has fully decided to become an Anatomist, and do some research work, on my approval, for his research discovery of Crawford's foramen, during our short period of dissecting. He left me assured of a successful future, which I must confess will be true if he keeps on with his discoveries.

Grady will become a preacher of Prophylaxis, after his experience with "Bugs" in the Bacteriological Laboratory. Kowalsky, very much dissatisfied with the German Autocracy, informed me one day that as soon as he graduates he intends to dethrone the Kaiser and appoint himself the head of the "Independent Polish Government."

But, dear reader, what shall we say of the many who refused to divulge for the future and how shall we look forward to the time when many of our numbers have become (celebrated as) the leading men of our profession. Let us imagine for a moment that ten or fifteen years has slipped away and that the Class of Nineteen Eighteen comes together in reunion. Time has dealt kindly with the boys. At the head of the table sits our friend "Gail," who has become famous by founding a college for training lady dental assistants, conferring the degree of "S. B."—"Some Baby."

Dobson looks happy and is still calling for "More Dixie."

O'Leary is circulating among his old friends, telling the story of his life to all, and showing the bottle containing his tonsils, which he has examined in the Bacteriological Lab. and found a new bacteria, "Diplococcus Diphtherial Pharyngitis."

Kelly looks ill at ease, but seems to recover his spirits when the announcement is made that there is no buffet in attendance.

But the hour for the after-dinner speeches has come, and we hear first from I. R. Cyr, telling of his experience while he was in France, and also of his class of French girls, whom he had taught to talk English, after which he tells of his "Wifey" up in Maine, and his flourishing practice.

McCarthy is called for next, but from force of habit he has gone to complete his refreshment at a nearby restaurant, just as he used to do after finishing his dinner in the boarding house in our student days.

Lister is called for, but we hear only a familiar "Bark."

Eppley reports that the practice of dentistry is an unsatisfactory business, but announces that he has made a great hit as a dancing master.

Bruyette has become the sporting editor for the "Collinsville Police Gazette."

Damren, who has become Secretary of Maine Dental State Board, informed us that our old friend Higgins is running a "chain" of dental parlors in opposition to Causland in the chief cities of Maine.

J. C. Toole makes the brilliant speech of the evening and thus demonstrates the truth of what he used to tell us:—??? "That his head was a receptacle for ideas and not merely an idle lounging place for hairs," after which he announced to us that our old friends O'Day and Heininger were playing Mutt and Jeff in the B. F. Keith's Vaudeville. He had an interview with them the preceding week and had found that Heinie has grown very "stout."

Cotter is next to rise, and as he assumes one of his striking attitudes we hope that he is about to entertain us with one of his characteristic and inspiring flights of oratory, but we are to be disappointed for he tells us that his silvery tongue lost its power to move the hearts of men when he tried to have the boys fill out blanks for the War Camp Fund of the Y. M. C. A. in our Senior Year.

However, he reports that he is very happy and prosperous with his little family in Willimantic, Conn.

Barnes is called for and gives us a detailed account of his numerous activities as a Dental Lecturer in a "Nurses' Training School."

Bell tells us in a modest little speech how feuds and moonshining disappeared from Fairmont when he was County Sheriff.

Keagle, in opposition to Perry and Sheer in his line of Dental Parlors, had not been successful, he said, but was now doing a big business running a large Sea Food Restaurant, "Oyster Stew a Specialty."

Charles begs to be excused on the plea that public speaking is out of his line, but great appreciation is manifest when he presents everyone with a copy of his recent book, entitled "How to Succeed Though Handsome," and many express the opinion that Charles should certainly be an authority on this subject.

Roscow informs us that he had never practiced Dentistry, but that he was making good running "Parisian Sporting Academy" in different cities along the Eastern Coast.

Etheridge tells us that he had succeeded his "Daddy" in the Dental world and that he is now doing good business on St. Paul Street.

Buckley, who has become a famous "Exodontist," tells us about his "Extracting Machine," upon which he recently obtained a patent from the U. S. Government.

Our old friend Lehr, who has come all the way from St. Johns, Newfoundland, delivers a very modest speech, with a few lines of poetry, and announces to us that Gear has never returned from France, but was doing what he calls "Reconstructive Dental Work."

We are all very much surprised when Costen announces that he had left his "Virginia Home" and is residing on Park Heights Avenue, having a fine practice and a nice home, comprising a "loving little wife" and an eight-year-old boy.

Wertheimer, after telling a few of his modest stories, says that he is now the sole proprietor of the New Victoria, in Cumberland, and is doing fine, reporting that Spicer, who has now become the President of the Western Maryland Railroad, was unable to attend the reunion on account of a "Strike," which he was trying to settle.

Peters tells us that he was residing in Wilmington, Del., with the sweetest little wife on earth; he never practiced Dentistry very much, but was making good money traveling for George Bontelle Dental Supply Co.

Chang has the biggest "Chop Suey" restaurant on Broadway, N. Y., and thought that he would never go back to Honolulu; fell in "love at first sight" with a Hawaiian Dancer and had been married five years.

Bullard is now a Professor in Tuft's Dental Department, lecturing twice a week on "BULL-ARDTHESIA," his own research anesthetic. He also informed us that Houston never practiced his profession, but got married soon after he got out and was now working for the Government.

Carbonneau became known all over the world for his fine work, especially in the Prosthetic line, in which he introduced various hand instruments for delicate work, such as pin inlays, pinlay bridges, etc.

Cummings informs us that he had not been very successful in the practice of Dentistry, but was making good since he had been preaching in opposition to Billy Sunday's Doctrine; he also tells us that Haughney became an eminent "Pathologist"; that he had found out a new definition for an "abscess."

Burt, who was now President of the New York Dental Association, delivers an interesting talk, enumerating the progressive steps that the profession had made in the last ten years. He informs us that Gettys and Chauvin were running a "Canoe Club" in the summer and were "Ice Skating Instructors" in the winter on Lake Champlain.

Nettleton reports that he was leading a happy life with his little "wifey," a good practice and a "Ford" constituting his happiness; also tells us that Rodden had left him recently, seeking a better "Out West."

The last called on was our old dear friend Shumaker; tells us of $25,000 a year practice; explains how he does it, at the same time being the Mayor of Buchannon.

But the clock is striking, the lights are growing dim, the curtain must fall on the happy reunion, and the Class Prophecy must end. What shall we say of the many whom we cannot mention by name, and how shall we really prophesy what shall really come to pass?

Some of us will occupy prominent positions in our profession—most of us humble ones. But let us not forget what constitutes true success. Only the few will make brilliant discoveries, attain prominent positions, or acquire great wealth and reputation; but every one of us can speak the kindly word, treat each patient to the very best of our ability, do our duty in whatever place we occupy in life, and leave the world better for our having lived, and that is the success that I wish you all.

Prophet.

Junior Class History

THE old adage "Tempus fugit" was proved the first day of October by the fact that once again the members of the Class of 1919 were assembled, fresh from their long vacation, determined to uphold the prestige they had won by their record of the past year.

The first "Roll Call" was enough to remind us that many of the smiling faces of old were missing; at once we realized they were answering the "Roll Call" of "Uncle Sam." The government, realizing the importance of the Dental Profession in this present war, passed a bill permitting the student to complete his course, so the absent ones were soon among us.

The Senior Class broke the even tenor of our ways by defeating our fast baseball team in the annual contest, the score being close during the whole game made it very exciting and anybody's game until the last ball crossed the plate.

The greatest event of the year took place early in October, when a class meeting was called to elect the class officers for the year, there being so many worthy men to undertake the duties, competition was very keen and real "stumping" was in vogue.

November the 8th a notice was read by the Dean, inviting us to meet Dr. Marden at the P. and S. dissecting room at 8 P. M. The course was taken well in hand by the fellows, and some even found new muscles and organs. The returns from the exam. proved that the class as a whole upheld the standard set by past classes.

November the 10th we were introduced to "Real Dentistry," when a notice was posted that we were to meet Dr. Furgenson at 3 P. M. He was to clinic on our first bridge. At once the laboratory was the scene of many busy Juniors. Cæsar made a "bridge," and now we can make one.

Christmas vacation began December 22nd, and most of the boys departed for home. January 2nd found the class back to their duties, determined to take advantage of every opportunity offered them and their determination has been carried out by them.

During the cold winter months days passed without many startling events, study being the fellows' pastime.

During the springtime the minds of the class turned to the thoughts of examinations and midnight lights burned well into the morning. The manner in which the class responded in the many quizzes was proof enough that they would be successful in all their exams.

The year coming to an end, even amid the sad event of saying good-bye to our Alma Mater, an expression of joy was worn by all.

Junior Class Prophecy

THE past and present have manifest themselves. Here, my dear friends, I will try to give you an insight into the future.

The great calamities which have been devastating Europe, and humanity as a whole, have at last come within our very borders. This has shaped the destiny of us all. It is now up to each one of us individually to do our "bit" towards making the world safe for democracy, and the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery will not be found wanting.

Every man in the Class has received his dissecting ticket. The Class will take up a collection and buy Day a wooden medal for his wonderful work in removing an eighteen-pound tumor from his subject.

The boys will do excellent work in the Infirmary, all getting their cards by January, 1919, consequently the Sophomores will get an early start. Goldberg is fast approaching the "Ideal Filling," his "Gutta Percha Special." Mellor will carry off the Diamond Medal, with Anderson in second place. Fowler will try for the Bridge Prize, but will be defeated by Dr. Ames' office boy.

The Class of 1919 are all enrolled in the Army and Naval Reserve Corps. Final examinations roll around and the boys go through like the soldiers that they are.

We all receive our Diplomas, respective commissions and are off to the front, to alleviate the sufferings of humanity, always keeping in mind the high Ideas and Standards we all imbibed so freely of while attending the B. C. D. S.

The names of the members of the Class will go down in history. Some have made great names for themselves; all have had successful careers and are accredited by the profession which holds a spot so dear in the hearts of each and every one of us.

Furthermore, let me predict that our Class will, as it goes out into the various corners of the earth, always keeping in mind our "Alma Mater," persevere, overcome all obstacles, and finally be crowned with success, the world being "blessed" that "The Class of 1919" ever existed.

A Night That No One Slept

O, Senior, dignified and tall,
Your dignity has fled,
I saw you wildly grasp a book
And vainly scratch your head:
You turn the pages rapidly,
At once a dozen scan:
What means your doleful state, my friend,
Is pleasure under ban?

O, Sturdy Juniors, thou art too
Almost a nervous wreck,
As by your dim and failing light,
You bend your patient neck
O'er volumes thick that seem to hold
Some secret fascination:
O, tell me what tonight alone
You show such aspiration?

Now, little weeping Freshman,
I'll take a peep at you,
Your falling tears at once proclaim
You're feeling awfully blue.
Your faithful head is sadly-bowed
Over a problem deep,
What! Can it mean that knowledge
Makes an infant weep?

Do you not think, I cannot tell
The cause of such agitation?
Why every one knows full well,
'Tis the night before examination.

Freshman Class History

OCTOBER NINTH found the Class of Nineteen Hundred Twenty-one of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery assembled. At the beginning there were forty members, but one has strayed away for a reason that will be given later.

The infant class, because of its being the smallest class for a long time and first to start in the new four-year course, was very green at the beginning, but by the generosity of all the Faculty and the upper classmen the Class was soon made to feel at home. During the first half of the year the Juniors and Seniors impressed upon the Class that they were Freshmen by continual yells and pass-ups. The yearly fate of the Class was held soon after the opening of the school by making the Class run the gauntlet down the back stairway of the college building, with the upper classmen lined up on both sides of the stairway. All members took this in a good manner, except one, who was never seen but once afterward.

Most all the time before Christmas was spent studying long bones, but not as fortunate as classes of years before we have not received the returns of this examination. After a real pleasant vacation, with most all returning on time, the Class has again resumed work, determined to keep up the pace and also make good in the three remaining years, thereby maintaining the high standard of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery throughout the country.

Freshman Class Prophecy

ALTHOUGH I doubt my ability to prophesy accurately the bright prospects of the '21 Class of the "Baltimore College of Dental Surgery," yet, as Class Prophet, I shall try to give you just an inkling of what the future has in store for us, and I pray thee, dear reader, be lenient with your criticism.

> Freshmen! Has any class a more mythical name?
> Surely no other is so deserving of fame.

Some people think it an embarrassment to be called a Freshman, but we, the Class of 1921, deem it a privilege and an honor. The individual members of this class are exceptional both as to mental and physical endowments, nor do they use their faculties only to bring glory to themselves, but to their College and its Professors.

During our short stay of four years at the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, we hope to establish a record which shall be recorded in the history of the College as one of the best and one which shall reflect credit upon this institution.

Having had one year added to our course, we feel sure that it will make us one year wiser and make us more capable of entering the profession of Dentistry.

Completing the college course and having successfully passed the State Board examinations, the Class of 1921 will be scattered to every part of the world, and I dare say success and celebrity will eventually come to each individual member.

We shall never be found wanting in genuine spirit, good scholarship and true manhood, so may we be an honor to our profession and to us may the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery always point with pride.

Prophet.

The Gal Back Home

Don't forget the "Gal" you left behind
The day you departed from home,
With tears in her eyes and a sob in her voice,
How she clung to you when you left her, alone.
You promised to write every day or more,
To be true to her is a thing you swore;
Did you keep your promise as a real man should
When you hit this old town of Baltimore?

Yes, maybe you did for a month or two,
Wrote, oh how lonely, dear, I am for you;
Then you met some Jane from this old burg,
Who called you "Doctor" and made eyes at you.
First it was Sunday, making fudge, oh, so quiet,
The next night "Kernan's" and a small-sized riot.
And all the time the real "Gal" was home
Just thinking and pining for you, alone.

Say, Pal, don't forget she's a good little "Gal,"
Just the kind that'll make a peach of a wife,
When the help of a real woman is needed in life;
Not the kind that'll say, "Oh, hello there, kid,
Where'll it be, say, let's make it a H—— of a night,
But who'll urge you high in the ladder of success.
Say, Pal, your letter is only a month behind,
So write your Gal today and make it your best.

The Harris-Hayden Odontological Society

THE Harris-Hayden Odontological Society was organized February 5th, 1908, at the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery by Dr. Foster, Dean of the school.

The name adopted by this society was in memory of the founders and creators of the B. C. D. S. viz.—Horace H. Hayden and Chapin A. Harris to whom the dental profession as well as the people of the civilized world owe everlasting gratitude.

Horace H. Hayden, one of the founders of the B. C. D. S., was born October 13, 1769, at Windsor, Conn. At a very early age he learned the trade of a carpenter and architect, at which he became very proficient. In the year 1795, requiring the services of a dentist, he called on Mr. John Greenwood, of New York, and he became so deeply impressed with the skill of this dentist and possibilities of the art that he concluded to adopt Dentistry as his calling. In 1800 he came to Baltimore and made known his services as a dentist, all the while studying the science of his art. That his scientific attainments were recognized by the medical profession is shown by the fact that in 1837 the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred on him both by the Jefferson Medical College, of Philadelphia, and University of Maryland.

In 1837-38 he gave lectures to the medical students at the U. of M. The lectures were not a success to the students' standpoint of view. In 1840 he helped to organize the first dental society in America, which was called the American Society of Dental Surgeons, and was elected its first president.

In 1839 he decided to open up an independent college, and he, with his colleague, Dr. Harris, started the first dental institution in the world. He died January 26th, 1844, at the age of seventy-five years.

Chapin A. Harris was born at Pompey, Onondago County, N. Y., in 1806. He began his medical studies when quite young and began his practice of medicine in Ohio. His attention was brought to dentistry by his brother and he moved to Baltimore, where he became a pupil of Dr. Hayden. He published the first dental text book—"Harris's Principles and Practice of Dentistry"—and the first dental dictionary. He was very enthusiastic with the idea of opening up an institution where students could learn the art of dentistry. He solicited the signatures from influential citizens for the application of a charter to the state legislature, which was granted February 1st, 1840. At the meeting of the first faculty he was elected Dean of the College, and Dr. Hayden was elected President. Dr. Harris was one of the founders of the American Society of Dental Surgeons and its President in 1844. He was editor of several magazines, one of which was the Guardian of Health, which appeared in 1841. After Dr. Hayden's death, he was elected President of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery, and retained his position until his death—September 29th, 1860.

The purpose of this society is to promote friendly intercourse among the student body; to arouse a greater interest in matters pertaining to the dental profession and better to fit ourselves as practitioners to take up the work of the various State and National Societies.

The meetings of the said society are held semi-monthly at which time, papers are read and discussed on Dental Research Work, etc., debates are held in which are discussed various subjects pertaining to the Dental Profession.

The principles for which the society was intended has been lived up to in the past year, during which time many meetings were held, all of them proving very interesting and beneficial to the student body.

The society has honorary, alumni, and active members, the active members are elected from the student body.

We earnestly hope that this society may extend its usefulness to the vast numbers which will follow us and maintain the standard for which this society was intended.

Y. M. C. A.

THE Session of 1917-18 was as successful as could be desired under unfavorable conditions and circumstances. As a whole, the spirit of the College Y. M. C. A. was better than the previous years, despite the fact that we were slightly handicapped by being deprived of the services of the Intercollegiate Secretary, Mr. Alvin E. Lindley, who is now with the International Young Men's Christian Association War Workers stationed at Camp Meade, Maryland. However, we were fortunate to have this year with us Mr. S. E. Coble, of the University of Maryland, whose constant interest and attention are being deeply appreciated. The loss of our leader was a slight setback in regards to our regular weekly meetings. In previous years, we had a Bible Study Class with a systematic course of study—the textbooks being "Manhood of the Master" and the "Life of Paul." In their places we have had many good and interesting talks by various ministers and men from other walks of life.

As we have been unsuccessful in conducting our regular weekly meetings this year, we sincerely hope that greater efforts are to be made next year to have a regular Bible study class. We feel that an hour or two a week devoted to the study for Christian leadership is a very important factor in students' life, although in our efforts we may seem to accomplish little. In this regard, we wish to emphasize the fact that our meetings are non-sectarian and all are invited to attend.

Our membership, while increasing steadily, should have a much larger proportion of the students.

The regular opening reception for the students and the one for the Cabinet was held as usual, and, on both occasions they were as successful as ever. At the reception for the Cabinet—various topics were discussed among which was that of social service in which opportunities were opened for young men to conduct some sort of special social work during spare moments—chiefly amongst the patients in hospitals and other institutions throughout the city. Along these lines, much should be accomplished by the officers and members for next year.

In conclusion, we wish to express our appreciation for the splendid co-operation of the members of the Faculty, the different Chairmen of the Committees and the members. We appreciate the privilege that you have given us and we only wish that we could have done more, as we strongly believe that our College Y. M. C. A. is casting a good influence among our students.

A Toast to our B. C. D. S. Boys in "Khaki"

Here's to our boys in Khaki,
The true Yankee sons they are;
Here's to our Pals in the service,
Who are off to their task "Over There."
We hope you get the Kaiser,
Grab his Crown, make a bridge to Berlin;
We wish you all sorts of good luck
When you and "Old Glory" march in.

Valedictorian Address----Class of 1917

Delivered May 25, 1917, by H. C. Witham, D. D. S.

MEMBERS of the Faculty, and friends, I am going to take just a few minutes of your time this evening to express in behalf of my classmates, our deep appreciation and unlimited gratitude to the Faculty of the Baltimore College of Dental Surgery for the unselfish, untiring efforts they have continually put forth for the past three years in order that they might impart to us the principles of dentistry.

We also wish to thank the people of Baltimore for the just, upright and hospitable manner in which they have treated us.

It is but three short years since we entered the folds of our Alma Mater and it is now interesting, amusing, and satisfying to look back at our good old freshman days.

Some of us did not know they made collars out of anything but celluloid, some of us felt lonesome for that country store, but none of us were very familiar with the art of dentistry.

Now on this 25th day of May, 1917, through the kind endeavor of our professors and a degree of perseverance on our own part, we are on the threshold of the dental profession ready to spring the latch and walk in.

The knowledge they have helped us acquire, the inspirations they have imparted to us, the thoughts with which they have invigorated our minds, the sweet human friendships that we have found among our dear professors, we highly cherish.

They have imbued in us a keen incentive to do good that will help us all through our lives. How can we express our thanks to the gentlemen who have taken such a keen interest in our welfare and who have done us so much lasting good? Surely words are not the answer. Let us try deeds.

We, the members of the graduating class, deem it a privilege, an honor and a pleasure to be able to serve humanity at a time when her need for assistance is greater than history has ever before related.

The dentist until recently has not been looked up to and esteemed as have his brothers in the medical profession, but today there is no field of special surgery more important than dentistry. On the battlefields of Europe, in the hospitals at home and abroad, the dentist, by his almost inconceivable achievements and masterful successes, has made the world sit up and take notice. Today no physical diagnosis is complete without a thorough examination of the teeth; no medical journal seems worth while without a treatise dealing with the relation of oral infection to systemic disease.

The world at large has awakened to the fact that good teeth and a healthy mouth are of the utmost importance in the successful career of the layman, the soldier, the sailor, and every last one of us.

Fellow classmates, now that we see the importance and magnitude of the work which lies before us, let us throw back our shoulders and make ourselves equal to the occasion.

Tomorrow we put our foot on the first rung of the ladder of success. The height to which we may climb depends wholly on our character, our perseverance, diligence and zeal.

Remember that a wise man despises not the opinion of the world, but estimates it at its full value.

If he be benevolent as well as wise he will remember that character affords him a thousand utilities; that it aids him to guide the erring and shelter the assailed.

Principle and integrity are the essence of life and character.

These are qualities which must be formed within ourselves, indissoluble and indestructible as the soul, and if we possess these qualities we trust to time and occasion to render them known. We may rest assured that sooner or later our character will establish itself.

Success, happiness and prosperity are within the grasp of every graduate and depends wholly on the manner in which he pilots his life.

Let us hope that we all encounter smooth waters and accomplish noble things.

It would not be proper on an occasion of this kind to forget to thank the people of Baltimore for the unlimited hospitality they have heaped upon us during our college career.

Back in 1839, seventy-seven years ago, Baltimore gave birth to the first dental college in the world, through the efforts of those never-to-be-forgotten gentlemen, Horace H. Hayden and Chapin A. Harris.

Ever since it has thrown open its wonderful resources to dental students who hail from every clime and they have benefited by and admired Baltimore's picturesque parks, pleasant homes, famous monuments, beautiful girls and, lest we forget, their magnificent police force.

I want to tell you, the people of Baltmore, we have appreciated your hospitality and we thank you one and all.

> And now, farewell, a word that must be and hath been,
> A sound which makes us linger yet farewell.

Farewell Baltimore, farewell professors, farewell B. C. D. S., the oldest, the greatest and the best, but good-bye, NEVER.

...SMOKE...

There are still some uninspired beings
Who seem always ready to croak
That "a girlie is only a girlie,"
But a good cigar is a smoke.
I find for my own satisfaction,
That the girlie is better by far,
For love can turn into ashes,
But so can a good cigar.

And they tell me I am erratic,
Since when I am asked to make
My choice of a good Havana or a girl
I always take the Damsel, for she's a medley
Of tears and laughter and fun,
A crypt for men's hearts and hopes shattered,
A goal for new races begun.

But it rouses the sporting blood in me
To bet on the narrowest race;
So I care not to light my Havana,
But to study a light on a face,
And I know that I'm playing with fire,
Yet a fire 'tis bigger by far
Than ever was or could be kindled
At the end of the finest cigar.

What care if it does end in ashes?
'Tis sweet while love's warm fire glows,
Like the "Smoke" it may vanish like vapor,
Or burn on forever—who knows?
So, when to me falls such a choosing
To light a cigar seems a joke,
Since I know that whate'er my decision,
I'll finish my days yet in smoke.

Annual Meeting of the Mustachitis Club

This year has been a most successful one as far as members are concerned, but, on the other hand, the harvest was far below par, probably due to the much damp weather.

The following appropriate prizes were awarded J. O'Toole and Nettleton ran about even in color, but the former had a much better growth, thereby winning the much-coveted gold medal, the latter receiving very honorable mention. Carbonneau entered this contest, but was disqualified for using burnt cork.

McElhinny won out in best "French Count Style" and received a curling iron.

Koontz, Curtin and Peters were tied for the prize offered for the best invisible decoration, each being presented with a bottle of "Goldberg's famous Mustache Dye" (Indelible pencil solution).

Miller had a fine invisible growth, but was disqualified for using peroxide.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder,
Peroxide makes the Mustache Blonder.

Dunn and Costen each received a safety razor for their efforts in raising red bristles.

Carey turned up in class one morning with a supposedly white mustache, but investigation disclosed the fact that it was obtained while eating. Wipe off your upper lip, Vic.

We wish to announce that the mustache, if we might call it such, of Hon. Percival Bailey expired at 2.30 o'clock the morning of March 16th. We didn't expect it to live much longer: the poor thing didn't have a ghost of a show.

Heininger, who was very persistent in raising a mustache, finally succeeded in exposing to view one, commonly called "Baseball Mustache." You know, nine on each side. For his efforts he received a bottle of "C. C. Sharp's Hair Tonic." It should work, Heinie. Have you seen the wonderful crop it raised for Sharp?

From the one that Speiser raised one might almost think he was trying to run in opposition to the far-famed Prophylactic tooth brush.

Godburn and N. E. Page, both tried to raise one, but up to date we have not seen the results of their heroic efforts. Better luck next year, boys; try a little fertilizer during the summer vacation.

Gettys, of the Senior Class, has a fair specimen, and a certain little miss rather likes the sensation it produces. She was heard to quote, "A kiss without a mustache is like soup without salt." How about it, Gettys?

Bob White was rather late in starting his, but he is now far ahead of some of the early starters.

At a special meeting called by the President it was unanimously voted that the following Freshmen—Rose, Shaffer and Gooch—were to remove their growths, due to the fact that they were still in the embryonic stage of development.

Before adjournment it was voted not to recognize the Sideburn Boys, a club organized by Sr. Spicer and Harry Chang.

Signed: Secretary.

P. S.:—We almost forgot our dear friend Hawkins, whose mustache reminds us of something we'd like to forget. Do you blame us for forgetting?

Odontalgia Poem

Some folks that never suffered say
That a toothache counts for naught,
Which proves that they have little charity
And less of kindly thought.
So, whether folks be aged,
In middle life or youth,
There's nothing makes them know themselves
Like a good, rough, jumping tooth.

It's easy saying, stand it, do,
When sufferers come in sight
With twitching nerves and darting pains,
Which nearly drives them light.
Advice of that sort is easy given,
By those who're dense and slow,
But who know folk Philosophy
With a toothache in the jaw.

Some chaff poor sufferers, but there's the kind
Who show their reasoning powers,
In saying, "What plagues others had
Is no affair of ours."
But if by chance they get a dose
Of toothache strong or mild,
They howl and growl about it like
As if they'd just gone wild.

I've had experiences myself,
And noticed other folks,
That called me soft, till all at once
They've had no time to joke;
For with their hands up to their jaws
They've had enough to do
To mind their own affairs a bit,
And been full-handed too.

A Senior's Thought

If a pretty girl comes in today,
I hope the Doctor comes my way,
But if the face should homely be
I hope he doesn't come to me.

Now take this learned man's advice,
Go somewhere else and pay the price,
Unless you have a pretty face
That every student wants to chase.

With homely girls we get thru quick,
On pretty girls we play our trick;
The work's done well and taken slow,
With every attention we can bestow.

"Your work must be very tiresome, Dr. Killary," she said, as she settled herself in the chair. It must be hard to be confined all day in an office, doing the delicate work required on people's teeth. "It is," turning his face away for a minute, "especially during the onion season."

Somebody said it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied,
That maybe it couldn't, but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he tried.
So he bucked right down with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried, he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, but he tried it.

Somebody scoffed, "Oh, you'll never do that;
At least no one has ever tried it."
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it,
With a light of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quite it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing,
That couldn't be done, but he did it.

The Dental Alphabet.

A—Is for amalgam, a filling that's good,
But let's put it back, where they chew their cud.
B—Is for bite, which may be taken in plaster,
And a little salt added to make it set faster.
C—Is for celluloid, used for a plate;
But that has about gone out of date.
D—Is for dies, they are good made out of zinc,
But some prefer tin, for it has less shrink.
E—Is for engine, which we most all use,
And it's man power or electric, just as you choose.
F—Is for Finney ridge, and it's natural to state,
Where all others fail, it will hold up the plate.
G—Is for grinding, just so much to do,
So be careful and do not grind clear through.

Grinds—Cont.

The Dental Alphabet - Cont.

H—Is for heat, to make solder flow,
But don't use too much for reasons you know.
I—Is for inlays, a restoration that's fine,
But beware of a broad cement line.
J—Is for Johnson's step, like blacks to commence,
Only not so much, at the enamel's expense.
K—Is for Koch's laws about bugs,
Be careful of your kisses and also your hugs.
L—Is for lips, and we all soon learn,
That phenol applied is sure to burn.
M—Is for mastication, and for health must be good,
And good teeth are essential in masticating food.
N—Is for nitrous and the oxide, alas,
The two together form laughing gas.
O—Is for oxides, in pouring dies give us trouble,
But add a little beeswax and it's clear as a bubble.
P—Is for plaster, and we know what we'd say,
If it was as scarce as sugar today.
Q—Is for Quacks, found in every profession,
In dentistry the advertiser is their nearest relation.
R—Is for roots, and if possible save,
For holding a bridge they act as a slave.
S—Is for sweating, this requires skill,
But a person don't have to be an extra spirt still.
T—Is for technic and not so hard to make,
When we know there is a diploma at stake.
U—Is for undercut, but not so hard to deal,
If you use cores or tilt the model at the heel.
V—Is for vulcanizer, we know that well,
If it wasn't for it, Dentistry would be bad.
W—Is for wax, both yellow and pink,
And to do without it we do not think.
X—Is for X-ray's inside information,
It shows you the roots of the teeth in relation.
Y—Is for Yohimbin, an anesthetic,
Now don't worry, but try to forget it.
Z—Is for zinc, it has little shrink;
We use it for a die and that is why, good-bye, say I. D. R. P.

O. L. Cook came into the costume shop on Howard street, just below the college building. He mopped his bald and shining pall with a big bandana handkerchief.

"What can I do for you?" the costumer said.

"I want a little help in the way of a suggestion," said Cook.

"I intend going to the French Students' Masquerade Ball tonight, and I want a distinctly original costume—something I will be sure no one else will wear. What would you suggest?"

The costumer looked him over attentively, bestowing special notice on the gleaming knob. "Well, I'll tell you," he said, "why don't you sugar your head and go as a pill?"

Gus, Ed and Bill (looking across from their rooms to the beautiful queen across the way in the second-story window):

Gus: "Believe me, fellows, she is some beautiful kid."

INFIRMARY RULES.

1. Never wear a clean coat; it looks too professional.
2. If you want anything in the line of instruments you will find them in the nearest open case; do not ask for them—you may offend the owner.
3. Throw all the soiled cotton on the floor; the cuspidors are only ornamental
4. Collect money from patients, but do not turn it in at the desk; the College is supported on its foundations.
5. In passing a foot engine, give it a kick; it aids the operator in his work.
6. When a demonstrator offers instruction, do the opposite thing; it is the best way to learn.
7. Smoking and chewing are advised and encouraged; partially smoked cigars and cigarettes can be had from the window ledge at head of stairs.
8. Do not keep appointments with your patients; it gives the College a good name; also tends to add to your chances to get off your infirmary requirements.
9. When things go wrong, let out a string of oaths to assure your patient you have a well-equipped vocabulary.
10. When demonstrators are engaged in private conversation, butt in; it is part of your business to learn of their private affairs, besides the enjoying your presence.

How well I remember that night in January,
For it was only the first day of the year,
When we were all jolly and made merry—
The cause was the ushering in of the New Year.

I remember how I felt that joyful night—
While the piano played and I was singing;
Who only knows but I was a sight,
And countless amounts of joy in my heart were ringing.

PEERLESS CHAIR

Peerless Harvard

(Gold Medal)

Dental Chairs

Bought for the War, Navy and Interior Departments by the U. S. Government, and Red Cross and Dental Ambulance Services

All the Dental Chairs that went into U. S. BATTLESHIPS and ARMY DENTAL DEPARTMENTS in the last four years and up to the declaration of war by the United States were PEERLESS HARVARDS.

The BRITISH GOVERNMENT also became purchasers of PEERLESS HARVARDS.

The low pressure, all brass pumping mechanism found only in the PEERLESS is a great factor in calculating the value of a Dental Chair, and makes the PEERLESS eminently valuable for Government uses, particularly in Battleships by reason of their being most of the time far from their base of supplies.

The PEERLESS HARVARD could not carry the honors of being the only Dental Chair to receive Gold Medals at the International Expositions if it were not the best and most beautiful product.

The PEERLESS HARVARD is being more rapidly installed in the highest class offices and Industrial Corporation Dental Departments than any other chair. This also could not prevail were it not the best Chair.

REBELLION IN HELL.

Big sparks flew from old satan's eyes,
"What's this I hear?" said he;
"They say that when the Kaiser dies,
He'll be consigned to me;
Old Hell to me is mighty dear,
The place is very fine,
But if they send that guy down here,
Believe me, I'll resign;
I'll stand for murderers and crooks,
And I will not disown
That I have here on my books,
The worst things ever known.
But my boys would get sore, I fear,
I know they would rebel:
The Kaiser cannot enter here,
For he would corrupt hell.
Our sulphur is too clean for him,
Our brimstone is too pure;
And if in one he took a swim,
He'd ruin it, I am sure.
Our company is not so swell;
Vile beasts we won't reject,
But keep the Kaiser out of hell—
We have some self-respect.

LECTURE ON BOARDING HOUSES.

All that is required in the makeup of a boarding house are prunes, hash, the star boarder, plain, common, ordinary boarders and the landlady. Landladies and boarders trust each other as much as cats trust Boston bulls. The affection that exists between them could be hidden in the eyetooth of a Lilliputian flea. Boarding houses are the same the world over. They are places whre persons kick about the grub they pay for on the installment plan, and where indigestion takes a strangle hold on every person registered therein. There'd be a noticeable lack of humor and tragedy in the world if it weren't for boarding houses. The "Missus" of the boarding house is usually a woman who only smiles when anybody isn't looking. She Hooverized on food long before Hoover said "Goo-Goo" and called for the rattle. She can hand out fifty-seven Heinz to a standstill when it comes to camouflaging hash. She scowls away the appetite of her boarders, and thus saves money as well as food. She is usually a widow or a woman disappointed in love, and her table is as bare as a Mexican hairless hound's back. Her chief amusement consists of making life miserable for the boarders, at which pastime she succeeds admirably. She serves hash and prunes for breakfast, prunes and hash for dinner and hash plus prunes for supper. The victims of boarding houses are usually as a rule ribbon clerks, ham actors, lingerie saleswomen, perfume demonstrators. Some boarders try to board on their nerve, but as the landlady outnerves them, they don't succeed very well. The atmosphere of a boarding house runs a close second to that of a morgue. No boarding house would be complete without a peroxide blonde and a wax-haired dude. "Pay as you enter" and "pay as you leave" is the iron-bound rule. A piano with three living keys is also very essential to a boarding house, not to speak of falling wall paper and cracked cups and saucers. But without them we would never have learned what an enemy hash is to mankind.

A dignified Junior named Smith, was trying to raise a mustache,
When he went to a dance, the girls they all laughed,
For they thought it was some kind of a rash.

Prince: "Say, Smithy, what did you do with the liver we took out of our stiff?"
Smith: "Why, the landlady had it for breakfast."
Prince: "Oh, hell, I wanted to look for the uniferous tubule."

It's all bull to a western kid. Get your knitting needles, you've got flat feet, Cumpston."

Village storekeeper (as pastor executes a masterly retreat from his store): "Daw ole hypocrite: this is the same lead quarter I put in the collection last Sunday."

An occurrence at the soap counter at Woolworth's Five and Ten Cent Store:

Jrs. Arsenault, Cotter and Day, while buying soap, engaged the fair maiden in conversation about what college they attended. And the fair maiden asked them as follows: "Do you boys belong to B. V. D.?"

Much laughter from the three Jrs. Then Cotter says:

"We know you meant to say B. C. D. S."

Jr. Yung's favorite pastime, viz: Passing 'em up.

Ask Merrihew and Jr. Chauvin for one of their fine odorous and distinuative "monogram" cigarettes.

Will someone kindly give McCrohan a prescription how to use Lysol?
